

CITIC Tower II

TheCaseSolutions.com

CITIC Tower II

TheCaseSolutions.com

The Tower of London
 The Tower of London is a castle on the north bank of the River Thames in London, England. It is one of the most famous castles in the world and has been a royal palace, a prison, and a place of execution.

The Crown Jewels
 The Crown Jewels are the regalia of the British monarchy, including the crown, scepter, and orb.

The Crown Jewels
 The Crown Jewels are the regalia of the British monarchy, including the crown, scepter, and orb.

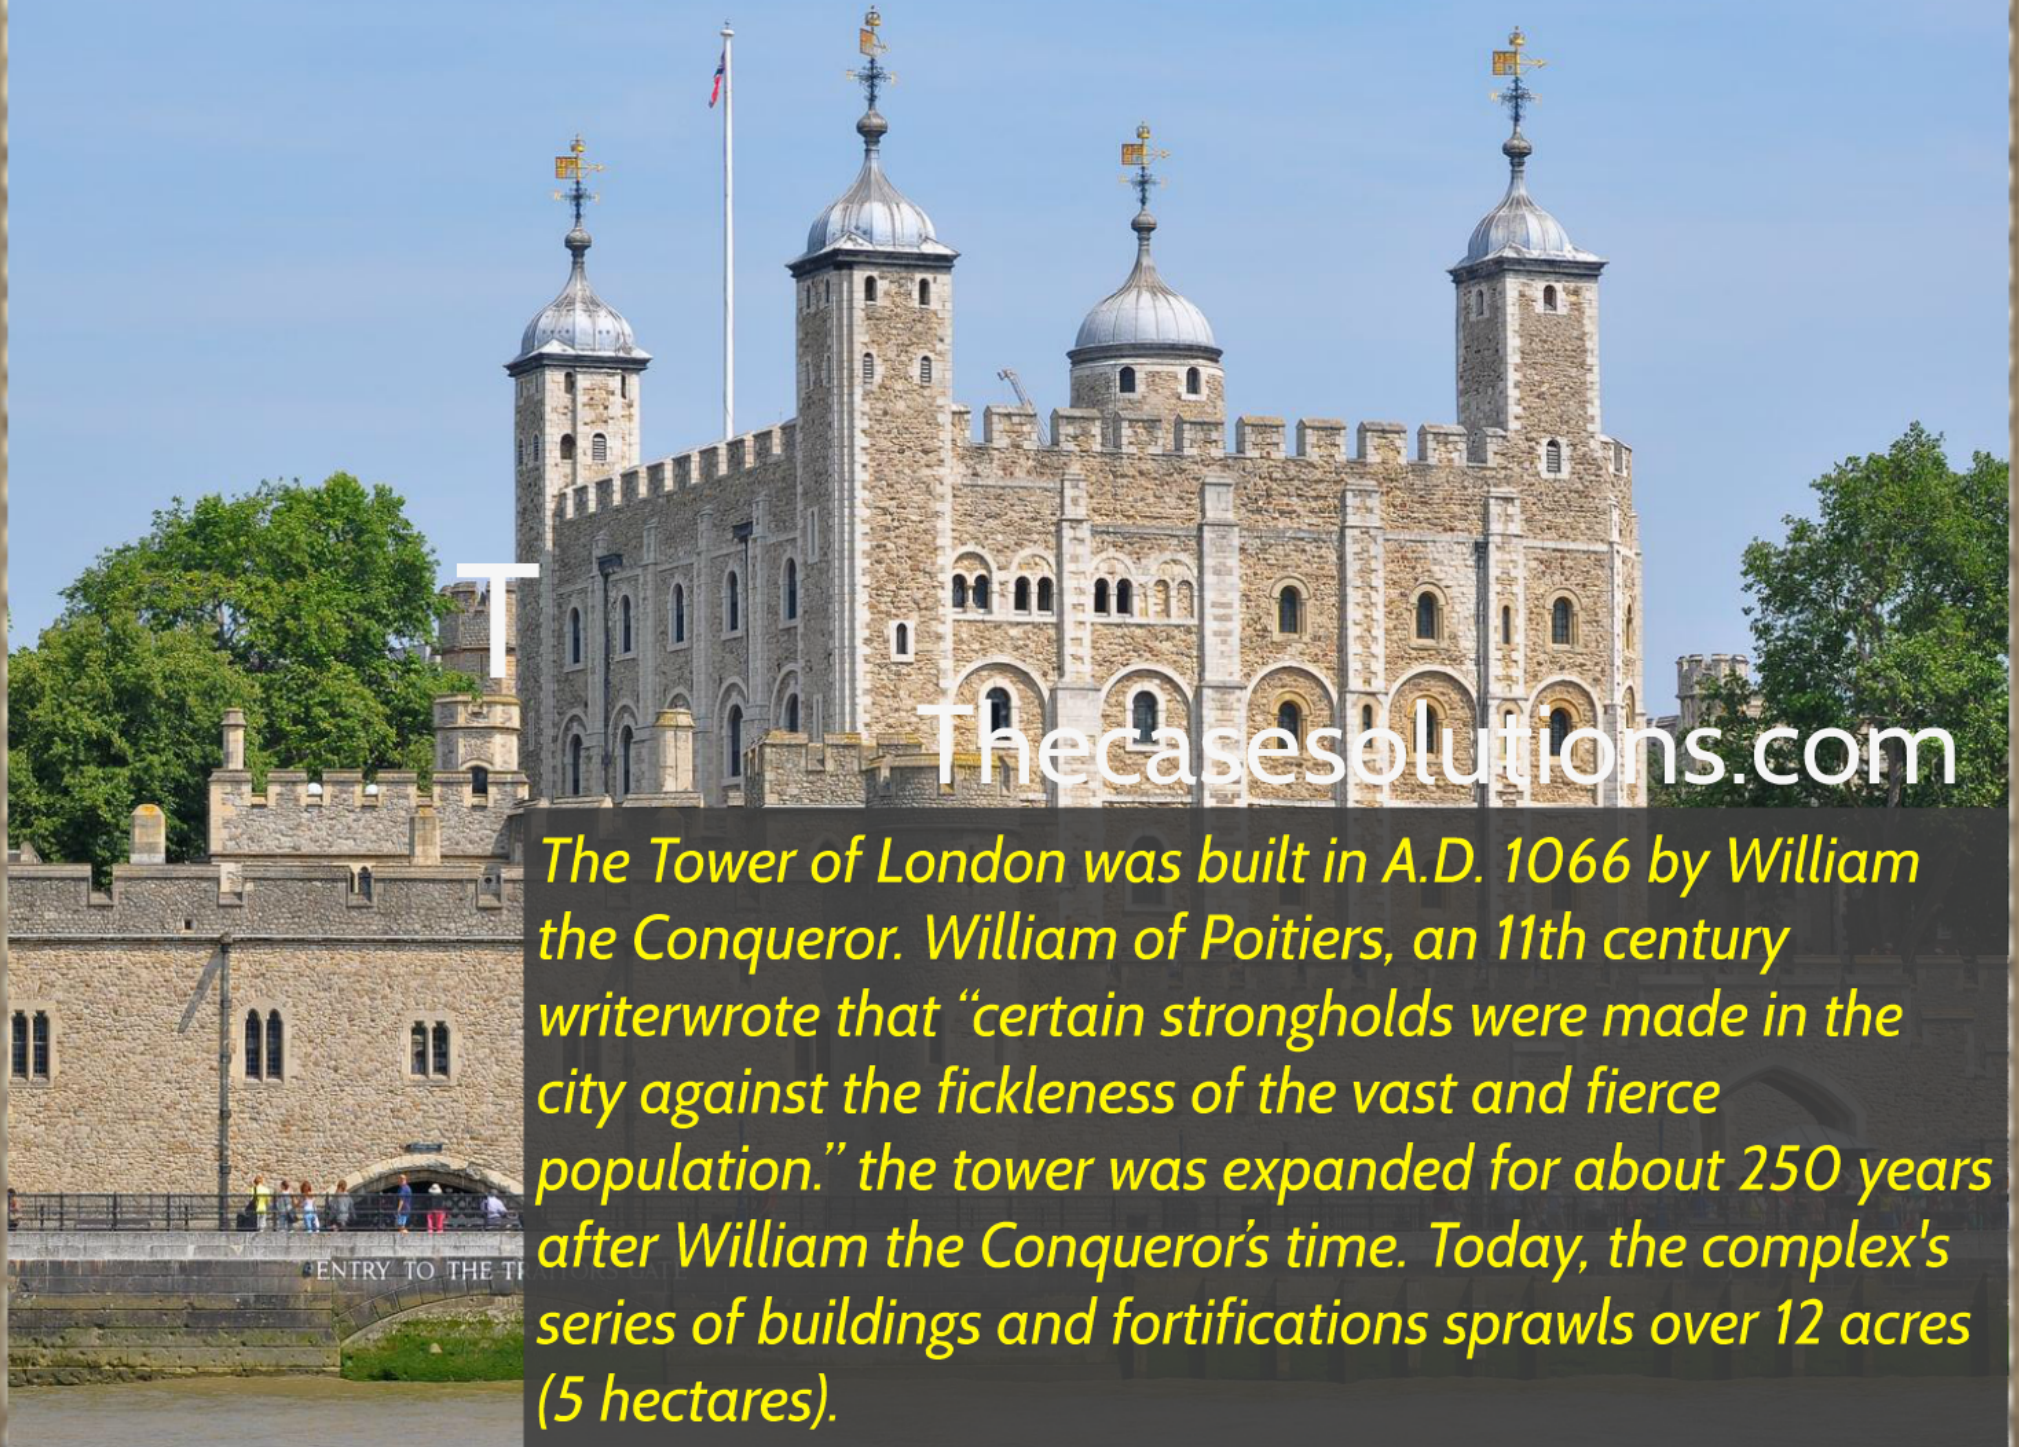

The Tower of London as a Fortress
 When the Tower was built, it was a fortress. It was built by William the Conqueror in 1066. It was built to protect the city of London from the Normans. It was built to protect the city of London from the Normans.

Ravens
 A No. 101 Squadron of the Royal Air Force is based at the Tower of London. The raven is a symbol of good luck and is said to be the guardian of the Tower.

CITIC Tower II

What's its origin?

Thecasesolutions.com

The Tower of London was built in A.D. 1066 by William the Conqueror. William of Poitiers, an 11th century writer wrote that “certain strongholds were made in the city against the fickleness of the vast and fierce population.” the tower was expanded for about 250 years after William the Conqueror’s time. Today, the complex's series of buildings and fortifications sprawls over 12 acres (5 hectares).

Where is it?

SUBWAY

Torre di Londra

A100

The Medieval Bar

London Bridge Pier

Thames

London Bridge Pier

Tower Bridge Exhibition Offices

Tower Bridge

Thecasesolutions.com

Google

Famous prisoners and torture

The Tower as a prison

Throughout its history the tower was used to imprison a wide range of prisoners. The two young princes, Edward and Richard, ages 12 and 9, who were the sons of Edward IV, were imprisoned by Richard III; two of Henry VIII's wives, Anne Boleyn and Katherine Howard, were both imprisoned and later executed; Another notable prisoner was Guy Fawkes, who in 1605 attempted to blow up the House of Lords. The last prisoner was Rudolf Hess, Hitler's deputy.

Thecasesolutions.com

The Crown Jewelers

The most popular

Today, the crown jewels are one of the most popular attractions at the Tower of London. The jewels include the crowns worn by the monarch at coronation and at the opening of Parliament.

imprison a wide range of Richard, ages 12 and 9,
led by Richard III, two of Howard, were both the prisoner was Guy
House of Lords, ity.