

Summary
TheCaseSolutions.com

Map 2017 © Charles Pinckney was the first person to propose the "Pinckney Plan" which served as the original foundation for the US Constitution. It was written by Charles Pinckney and James Wilson in 1787. Pinckney had some 100 copies of the plan. The plan had some 100 copies. The people did not have enough copies.

What is The Pinckney Plan?
TheCaseSolutions.com

Charles Pinckney was the "step-father" of the US Constitution. His beliefs were similar to those of Hamilton's. Pinckney had contemporary value, which in though it contrasted to his kin in SC aristocracy, Hamilton's beliefs were seen as foreign. After submitting his plan to the convention, Madison made notes about it. In 1990, Pinckney was saved by a fellow delegate, James Wilson. Wilson found notes from the plan at the convention. A few things Pinckney had proposed were in the final constitution.

TheCaseSolutions.com

Pinckney street

Summary
TheCaseSolutions.com

Map 2017 © Charles Pinckney was the first to propose the "step-father" of the US Constitution. His beliefs were similar to those of Hamilton's. Pinckney had contemporary value, which in though it contrasted to his kin in SC aristocracy, Hamilton's beliefs were seen as foreign. After submitting his plan to the convention, Madison made notes about it. In 1990, Pinckney was saved by a fellow delegate, James Wilson. Wilson found notes from the plan at the convention. A few things Pinckney had proposed were in the final constitution.

What is The Pinckney Plan?
TheCaseSolutions.com

Charles Pinckney was the "step-father" of the US Constitution. His beliefs were similar to those of Hamilton's. Pinckney had contemporary value, which in though it contrasted to his kin in SC aristocracy, Hamilton's beliefs were seen as foreign. After submitting his plan to the convention, Madison made notes about it. In 1990, Pinckney was saved by a fellow delegate, James Wilson. Wilson found notes from the plan at the convention. A few things Pinckney had proposed were in the final constitution.

TheCaseSolutions.com

Pinckney street

What is The Pinckney Plan?

TheCaseSolutions.com

Charles Pinckney was the "step-father" of the US Constitution. His beliefs were similar to those of Hamilton's. Pinckney had contemporary value, which in though it contrasted to his kin in SC aristocracy, Hamilton's beliefs were seen as foreign. After submitting his plan to the convention, Madison made notes about it. In 1990, Pinckney was saved by a fellow delegate, James Wilson. Wilson found notes from the plan at the convention. A few things Pinckney had proposed were in the final constitution.

Summary

TheCaseSolutions.com

May 29, 1787, Charles Pinckney went to the convention to present The Pinckney Plan, on the same day as the VA Plan was accepted. When John Q. Adams was getting ready for publication of the plan, the Pinckney Plan was nowhere to be found. It had been lost. Pinckney had several rough drafts of the plan. The plan had been rejected because the people did not have enough power.

Bubble Map for Pinckney Plan

TheCaseSolutions.com

A background network diagram with grey nodes and lines on a light grey background. A large teal rectangle is centered on the page, containing the text.

Starts with TheCaseSolutions.com
the people

House of

TheCaseSolutions.com

Delegates

Senate

TheCaseSolutions.com

Two large teal arrows pointing downwards, positioned above the teal banner.

TheCaseSolutions.com

Federal Court

A wide, grey, curved bar at the bottom of the page, with a network diagram background.