

The Fab Four of Tennis

Thecasesolutions.com

The Fab Four of Tennis

Thecasesolutions.com

Toys

G.I. Joe

The G.I. Joe was one of the most popular toys for boys in 1964. It was a massive success. The company Hasbro had made it. There were many different kinds of G.I. Joes, like astronauts, deep sea divers and many more. They did not call it a doll they called it an action figure. There were two movies where the action figure originated from, they were G.I. Joe: The Rise of Cobra and Transformers 2.

Thecasesolutions.com

Rock 'Em Sock 'Em Robots

The Rock 'Em Sock 'Em Robots were originally manufactured by the Marx Toy Company in 1966. They required no batteries. They were very popular. The robots could punch and move side to side with a hand control. One problem with the game is that broke easy.

Thecasesolutions.com

Thecasesolutions.com

Lego's

Thecasesolutions.com
Lego's were introduced to the United States in 1962. They were a big hit. They came in loose sets of bricks. By 1966, lego's came in sets and kids could snap pieces together and make planes, cars, ships, and many other things. Lego's were really fun for little kids because they could build different things and learn from it.

Easy Bake Oven

In 1963, the Easy Bake Oven was the first working toy oven. It was a light bulb heated oven and was invented by Kenner Products. It was a little girls dream to have one and over 500,000 kids had gotten one the first year it came out.

Hot Wheels

In 1968 is when Mattel first introduced Hot Wheels. They had many different kinds of custom cars. They were seeking a popular toy for boys to play with. There were more than 10,000 designs of hot wheel cars in 43 years.

G.I. Joe

The G.I. Joe was one of the most popular toys for boys in 1964. It was a massive success. The company Hasbro had made it. There were many different kinds of G.I. Joes, like astronauts, deep sea divers and many more. They did not call it a doll they called it an action figure. There were two movies where the action figure originated from, they were G.I. Joe: The Rise of Cobra and Transformers 2.

Thecasesolutions.com

Thecasesolutions.com

GI JOE

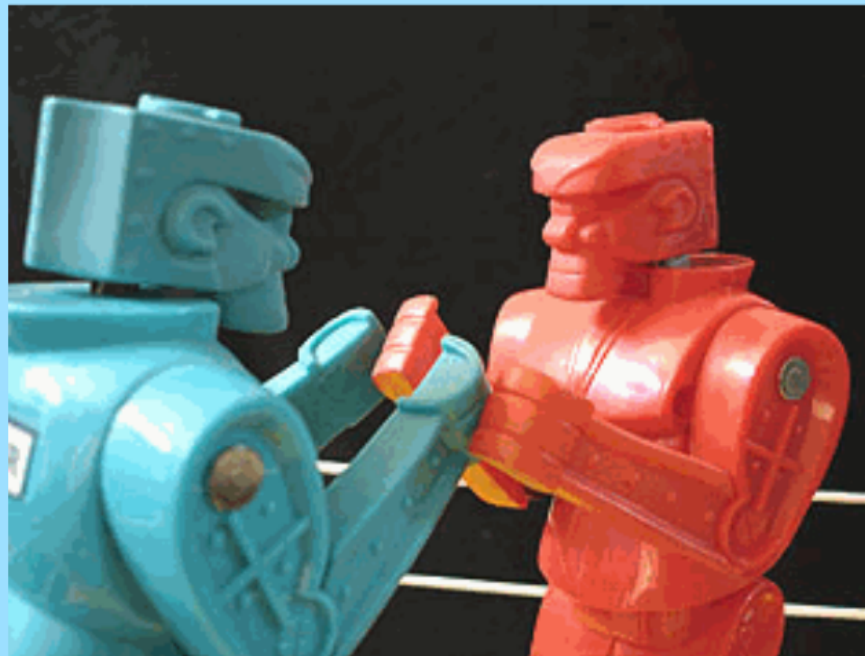

COLLECTORS' CLUB

Thecasesolutions.com

Rock 'Em Sock 'Em Robots

The Rock 'Em Sock 'Em Robots were originally manufactured by the Marx Toy Company in 1966. They required no batteries. They were very popular. The robots could punch and move side to side with a hand control. One problem with the game is that broke easy.

Thecasesolutions.com

Lego's

Thecasesolutions.com

Lego's were introduced to the United States in 1962. They were a big hit.

They came in loose sets of bricks. By 1966, lego's came in sets and kids could snap pieces together and make planes, cars, ships, and many other things. Lego's were really fun for little kids because they could build different things and learn from it.