Institutional analysis is an essential part of any new planning and management initiative

The purpose of it is to assess:

- the feasibility of the project within current political, economic and legal environment,
- the influence of the environment on the project implementation process
  - as well as the organization's ability to implement the project

It covers both formal and informal institutions government agencies

business, social or family networks or associations

"old" institutionalism

methods of other social sciences

Politics & Law → Economics

Inductive reasoning

Methodological individualism

primary - individuals secondary - institutions

new-institutionalism

methods of neoclassical economics

Economics → Politics & Law

Deductive reasoning

Holism

primary - institutions secondary - individuals

Institutionalism uses positive and normative research methods, thereby determining the possible transition from existing to more perfect institutional forms
