What is "Who Moved My Cheese?" and Why do I Care About it?

"Remember a useful lesson concerning the changes that are to come. The best time to plant an idea is long ago; the second best time is now. Stop Procrastinating!"

Change is inevitable, and if you do not change, you can become irrelevant.

Haw

- In the story Haw is a logical, mouse sized man looking for cheese in the maze.
- When the cheese goes missing in the first location, Haws first reaction is to wait until it comes back because he is comfortable with their current position and fearful of the process of looking for new cheese.
- After a long time of waiting, Haw realizes he needs to overcome his fear of failing to find new cheese and begin the search again.
- Haw has revelations throughout the story which changes his behavior and way of thinking about adapting to change.
- In an organization, the Haw like people are those who slow the progress of the company down.

Hem

- Hem is also a logical thinking, mouse sized man looking for cheese in the maze.
- When the cheese goes missing in the first location of the maze, Hem waits around waiting for the cheese to come back.
- Hem is comfortable in his current location and doesn't like the idea of change.
- When Haw suggests that they search for new cheese, Hem is stubborn and stays and waits for the old cheese.
- In an organization the Hem like people slow the organization down and are either let go or prevent progress.

HEM

one who denies to change as he fears it will lead to something worse
