What does beauty mean to you?
 Beauty in appearance means very little to me. In expressing yourself, sure. But in acting like your someone else because you hate your own appearance is different. I feel like everyone has their own kind of beauty either in or out.

What are some wrong definitions and why do you disagree?
 Some wrong definitions of beauty are when people, occasionally women, believe that they aren't beautiful and that they begin to wear too much they begin to dress exactly like everyone else. It's better to differentiate sometimes and express yourself through how you act, dress, and appear to society.

Who should be considered beautiful or happy?
 Being beautiful should go beyond looks because in life one may find more than just physical appearance. Some people will often experience for their inner beauty. It isn't always in looks, but it is in the heart. It is in the way one looks and how one is content with their own and how they get on a good road to discovering their beauty.

What makes a beautiful person? Is there something beautiful?
 In my eyes, a beautiful person is one who doesn't care what others think and doesn't care what other people think about their looks. They are strong because they usually can't be brought down by harsh words or dirty looks.

What extremes are people willing to take to make themselves beautiful? What extremes is someone willing to take to make something beautiful?
 An extreme someone is willing to take is when some one does plastic surgery. I think of this as an extreme because if one makes the decision and change your physical appearance then you may never get it back to it's original form. An extreme people will go through to make something beautiful is maybe if you're a plastic surgeon then you are going through an extreme, in this case surgery which can be very nasty, then you are changing a person's physical appearance which could be permanent. Missing up would be terrific.

How is beauty represented in your society? How is it defined?
 People of America usually define beauty by your physical appearance. One of the better ways to define beauty is through not only their physical appearance but also their inner appearance.

To Conclude.....
 To conclude beauty, I think instead of looking on the outside, next time look on the inside. You may see the most beautiful person in the world even if you think that their physical appearance is dislikeable. Don't forget to search hard even if may take awhile!

In my eyes, a beautiful person is someone who treats others right. They don't care what other people think about their looks. They are confident because they know they were born that way.
