Strategic

It is intrinsically motivated behavior that coincidentally advances the corporation's strategy.

Structural

Houses actions that benefit society but not shareholders, creating a structural barrier to corporate action.

Choice

They choose to observe norms and customs.

Compliance

They are mandated by law or regulation to comply.

Vision Shortage

Death of vision among business leaders

Peer Encouragement

By publicizing their success, business leaders can encourage further innovation by other companies

The threat posed by digital technology to intellectual property

Greatest Barrier

Intellectual property rights are essential for innovation. However, the digital age has made it easier to copy and distribute content, which can undermine the value of intellectual property and discourage investment in research and development.

Most Effective Strategy

Companies should focus on creating a strong intellectual property portfolio and implementing robust security measures to protect their assets.

- Pressure of government regulations can help responsible corporate behavior migrate from structural frontier to civil foundation.
- Erroneous judgments in the structural frontier often face less scrutiny and can therefore remain in force indefinitely, creating a social cost that ultimately diminishes the civic foundation.
- Regulators should be sure to establish metrics that enable them to assess whether a regulation's value exceeds its costs.
