

NEWS IN THE DIGITAL WORLD: WHO PAYS?

Thecasesolutions.com

DESIGNED BY PÉTER PUKLOS FOR PREZI

THE JAPANESE INVASION IN MANCHURIA

Thecasesolutions.com

- The Japanese tried to resolve their economic problems by conquering China.
- Guomindang, the main political party of China, tried to protect Manchuria from the Japanese Troops.
- A (not so accidental) explosion on a railway enraged the Japanese officers to take over the whole province.
- The Japanese government was not informed of the troops movement until it happened, showing their lack of power and influence. In the end, they had no choice but to support the conquest.

Guomindang (Kuomintang) was China's Traditional Political Party led by Chiang Kai-shek.

Manchuria was targeted because of the province's abundance of oil and iron ore.

Thecasesolutions.com

RESULTS OF THE INVASION

Thecasesolutions.com

- The Japanese troops successfully took over Shanghai (a major industrial city) and Beijing.
- Manchuria was named Manchukuo.
- The U.S. government refused to support Japan.

1937-1945) - JAPANESE

Guomindang (Kuomintang) was China's Traditional Political Party led by Chiang Kai-shek.

Manchuria was targeted because of the province's abundance of oil and iron ore.

Thecasesolutions.com

RESULTS OF THE INVASION

Thecasesolutions.com

- The Japanese troops successfully took over Shanghai (a major industrial city) and Beijing.
- Manchuria was named Manchukuo.
- The U.S. government refused to acknowledge Manchukuo and Japan's conquest in China.
- In return, Japan resigned from the League of Nations.
- Japanese troops commenced the building of more railways in Chinese cities and warships at home.

upport the

PE

R

AFRICA

EAN

OCEAN

RESULTS OF THE INVASION
Thecasesolutions.com
• The Japanese troops successfully took over Shanghai (a major industrial city) and Beijing.
• The U.S. government refused to acknowledge Manchukuo and Japan's conquest in China.
• In return, Japan resigned from the League of Nations.
• Japanese troops commenced the building of more railways in Chinese cities and warships at home.

MAO'S IDEOLOGY

Thecasesolutions.com

- Joseph Stalin installed the Chinese Communist Party in 1921.
- Mao Zedong, born to a very poor family, first found the work of Karl Marx as a young boy, which inspired his strong impulse in violent effort.
- As one of the leaders of the Communist Party, Mao adopt a Marxist-Leninist Ideology.
- As a result, Mao targeted people who lived in the countryside.

THE LONG MARCH
Thecasesolutions.com
• Feeling threatened by the Communist Party, in 1927 Chiang executed many of the members and the ones who fled, including Mao Zedong, stayed in Jiangxi Mountain.
• In 1931, Mao made the Chinese Soviet republic in Jiangxi.
• Mao fought the surrounding troops through the siege of Guangxi.
• In 1934, Chiang's party successfully pushed the Communist Party back again.
• Their one year journey of over 6,000 miles through rigid terrain and bombs from the Chiang Kai-shek's airforce known as The Long March.

MAO'S IDEOLOGY
Thecasesolutions.com
• Leaving towards Marxism, Mao found himself denying Communism's harsh industrial life. Since the Chinese economy relied greatly in agriculture, he found that as only common sense to focus on the countryside life.
• Mao redistributed lands of wealthy people to the hands of poorer citizens.
• Mao advocated for women's equality. He gave them jobs and banned the old custom of foot binding.
• Mao advocated for workers' equality. He gave workers more pay and arranged marriage and forbidding workers to be scolded by the boss.
• Mao advocated for peasants' equality. He gave them land and banned the old custom of land ownership.
• The Communist Party's compilation towards the new era was continuously new propaganda.

The background of the slide is a world map. A semi-transparent white rectangular box is positioned in the upper half of the image, containing the title and the website name. The map shows various countries in different colors, with the word 'INDIA' visible in the bottom right corner.

MAO'S IDEOLOGY

Thecasesolutions.com

- Leaning towards Marxism, Mao found himself denying Communism's focus in industrial life. Since the Chinese economy relied greatly in agriculture, he found that it's only common sense to focus on the countryside life.
- Mao redistributed lands of wealthy people to the hands of poorer civilians.
- He took better care of peasants, which made up a great number of his army, than the Goumindang Party.
- Mao advocated for women's equality. He gave them jobs and banned arranged marriage and footbinding where his party ruled.
- However, no women were given leadership positions in the party.
- The Communist Party's compassion towards the ones neglected by the traditional government won many of the crowd and was continuously used as propaganda.

THE LONG MARCH

Thecasesolutions.com

- Feeling threatened by the Communist Party, in 1927 Chiang executed many of the members and the ones who fled, including Mao Zedong, stayed in Jiangxi Mountain.
- In 1931, Mao made the Chinese Soviet republic in Jiangxi.
- Mao fought the Goumindang troops through the usage of guerrilla warfare; he retreated his troops again and again to confuse the enemy.
- In 1934, Chiang's party successfully pushed the Communist Party back again.
- Their one year journey of over 6,000 miles through rigid terrains and bombs from the Chiang's aircraft is infamously known as The Long March.

THE NAZI WITHIN

- Chiang and the government of China escaped to the mountain of Sichuan.
- He built an army, not to fight the Japanese, but to defend against the Communist Party.
- Failed taxation to raise money for the army resulted in the printing of money. This caused inflation and corruption within the government.
- Mao built his army with little help from the Soviet Union in Yan'an, Shaanxi province.
- Mao continued to use propaganda as he showed that the Communist party was the only ones truly fighting the Japanese.

RESULTS OF SINO - JAPANESE WAR (1937-1945)

the troops movement until it h showing their lack of power an the end, they had no choice bu conquest.

Thecasesolutions.com

- On July 7, 1937, Japanese troops attacked Chinese forces near Beijing.
- They seized Beijing, Tianjin, and Shanghai. The navy blockaded the entire coast of China.
- Within a year of bombing and burning villages, the Japanese troops controlled the lower Yangzi and Yellow River Valleys.
- China's resistance forced Japan to exhaust more supplies for their troops, and as a result, taxes rose and life became harder in Japan.
- The Nanjing Massacre (Rape of Nanjing) between 1937-1938: involved Japanese troops sexually abusing 20,000 women, killing 20,000 civilians and looting and burning the city.