

TTTech (B): The Path Forward

TheCaseSolutions.com

Duane Hanson

- 1925-1996
- Born in Minnesota
- Hyper-realist Sculptor
- Became interested with the human figure at a very young age
- Taught art in Germany in the 1950's, where he began to experiment with resin and fiberglass

TheCaseSolutions.com

Conclusion

In addition to bringing attention to issues in his world, Hanson focused on the middle class of America. Many of his subjects were repairmen, guards, housewives, and janitors, who get little recognition or thanks for their hard work. He shows that the "American Dream" is not all that it is cracked up to be. His work gives us insight to what it really means to be an American.

TheCaseSolutions.com

Why it was created

During this time in his art career, Hanson was concerned with political issues, including war, gang violence and homelessness. Hanson created sculptures to bring attention to prominent issues in the world around him. He wanted to make people think about the world they live in and how they could make it better. He felt homelessness was an issue that needed to be paid attention to.

TheCaseSolutions.com

Other Pieces

Drug Addict (1974)

TheCaseSolutions.com

Homeless Person

- Created in 1991
- Pop Art
- Fiberglass, polyester resin, clothes, cardboard, wood
- 5 feet 6 inches tall (168cm)
- Displayed in the Hamburg Kunsthalle Museum in Hamburg, Germany

TheCaseSolutions.com

What's it worth?

Security Guard
Sold in May 2012 for $400,000

Traveller
Sold in July 2024 for $245,000

TheCaseSolutions.com

TTTech (B): The Path Forward

TheCaseSolutions.com

Duane Hanson

- 1925-1996
- Born in Minnesota
- Hyper-realist Sculptor
- Became interested with the human figure at a very young age
- Taught art in Germany in the 1950's, where he began to experiment with resin and fiberglass

TheCaseSolutions.com

Conclusion

In addition to bringing attention to issues in his world, Hanson focused on the middle class of America. Many of his subjects were repairmen, guards, housewives, and janitors, who get little recognition or thanks for their hard work. He shows that the "American Dream" is not all that it is cracked up to be. His work gives us insight to what it really means to be an American.

TheCaseSolutions.com

Why it was created

During this time in his art career, Hanson was concerned with political issues, including war, gang victims and homelessness. Hanson created sculptures to bring attention to prominent issues in the world around him. He wanted to make people think about the world they live in and how they could make it better. He felt homelessness was an issue that needed to be paid attention to.

TheCaseSolutions.com

Other Pieces

Drug Addict (1974)

TheCaseSolutions.com

Homeless Person

- Created in 1991
- Pop Art
- Fiberglass, polyester resin, clothes, cardboard, wood
- 5 feet 6 inches tall (life-size)
- Displayed in the Hamburg Kunsthalle Museum in Hamburg, Germany

TheCaseSolutions.com

What's it worth?

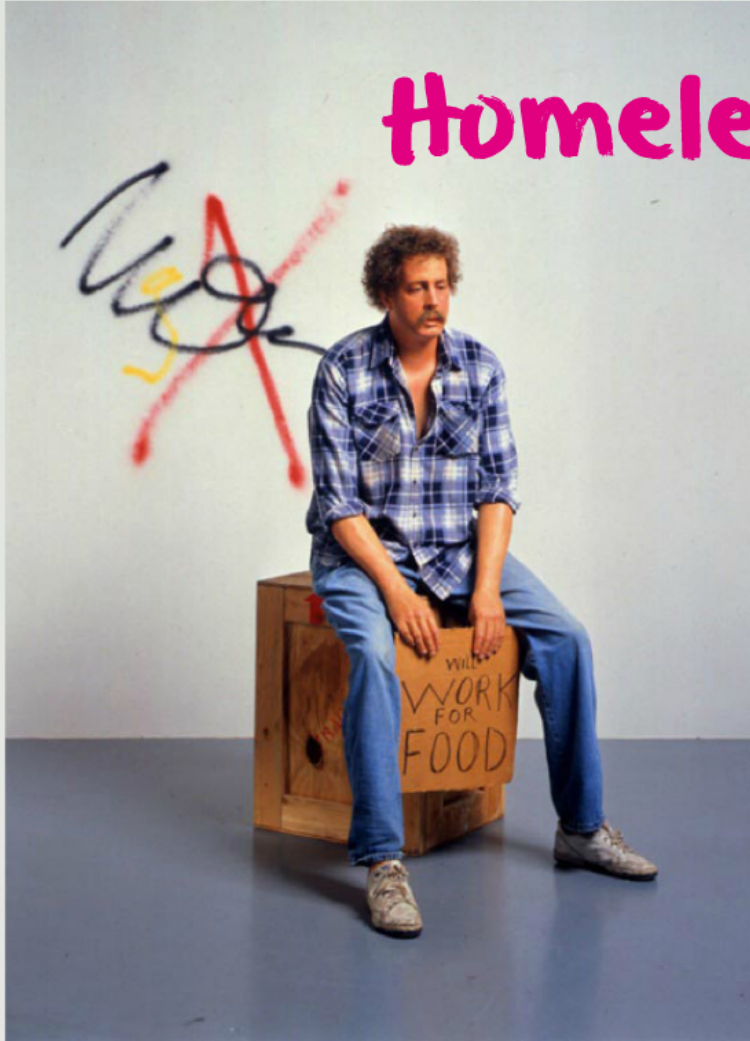

Security Guard
Sold in May 2013 for $410,000

Traveller
Sold in May 2014 for $245,000

TheCaseSolutions.com

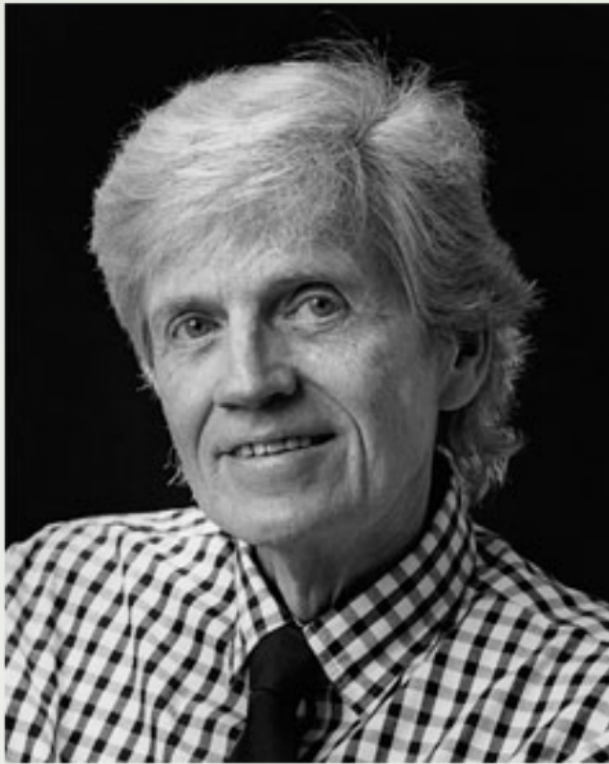

Homeless Person

- Created in 1991
- Pop Art
- Fiberglass, polyester resin, clothes, cardboard, wood
- 5 feet 6 inches tall (life-size)
- Displayed in the Hamburg Kunsthalle Museum in Hamburg, Germany

TheCaseSolutions.com

Duane Hanson

- 1925-1996
- Born in Minnesota
- Hyper-realist Sculptor
- Became interested with the human figure at a very young age
- Taught art in Germany in the 1950's, where he began to experiment with resin and fiberglass

TheCaseSolutions.com

Why it was created

During this time in his art career, Hanson was concerned with political issues, including war, gang victims and homelessness. Hanson created sculptures to bring attention to prominent issues in the world around him. He wanted to make people think about the world they live in and how they could make it better. He felt homelessness was an issue that needed to be payed attention to.

TheCaseSolutions.com

What's it worth?

Security Guard

Sold in May 2011 for $410,500

Traveler

Sold in May 2014 for $245,000

TheCaseSolutions.com

Other Pieces

Drug Addict (1974)

TheCaseSolutions.com

Queenie II (1988)

Conclusion

In addition to bringing attention to issues in his world, Hanson focused on the middle class of America. Many of his subjects were repairmen, guards, housewives, and janitors, who get little recognition or thanks for their hard work. He shows that the "American Dream" is not all that it is cracked up to be. His work gives us insight to what it really means to be an American.

TheCaseSolutions.com

TTTech (B): The Path Forward

TheCaseSolutions.com

Duane Hanson

- 1925-1996
- Born in Minnesota
- Hyper-realist Sculptor
- Became interested with the human figure at a very young age
- Taught art in Germany in the 1950's, where he began to experiment with resin and fiberglass

TheCaseSolutions.com

Conclusion

In addition to bringing attention to issues in his world, Hanson focused on the middle class of America. Many of his subjects were repairmen, guards, housewives, and janitors, who get little recognition or thanks for their hard work. He shows that the "American Dream" is not all that it is cracked up to be. His work gives us insight to what it really means to be an American.

TheCaseSolutions.com

Why it was created

During this time in his art career, Hanson was concerned with political issues, including war, gang victims and homelessness. Hanson created sculptures to bring attention to prominent issues in the world around him. He wanted to make people think about the world they live in and how they could make it better. He felt homelessness was an issue that needed to be played attention to.

TheCaseSolutions.com

Other Pieces

Drug Addict (1974)

TheCaseSolutions.com

Homeless Person

- Created in 1991
- Pop Art
- Fiberglass, polyester resin, clothes, cardboard, wood
- 5 feet 6 inches tall (life-size)
- Displayed in the Hamburg Kunsthalle Museum in Hamburg, Germany

TheCaseSolutions.com

What's it worth?

Security Guard
Sold in May 2013 for $410,000

Traveller
Sold in May 2014 for $245,000

TheCaseSolutions.com