

Thomas J. Watson, IBM and Nazi Germany, Portuguese Version

Thecasesolutions.com

Thomas J. Watson, IBM and Nazi Germany, Portuguese Version

Thecasesolutions.com

Kodak

In World War II, the Kodak German Branch used slave laborers from concentration camps. Many other German businesses were also strongly involved with the Nazis.

Thecasesolutions.com

IBM

Thecasesolutions.com

IBM custom-built machines that the Nazis could use to keep track of everything from train schedules to even bank accounts to holocaust victims.

Volkswagen

Thecasesolutions.com

It is known that Ferdinand Porsche the man behind Volkswagen and Porsche was associated with Hitler and made their vehicles and Hitler was the one who named the Volkswagen Beetle.

Hugo Boss

Thecasesolutions.com

Hugo Boss was responsible for the uniforms the Nazis wore and he made a contract with Hitler 8 years after his business was up and running.

Bayer

Thecasesolutions.com

Bayer was involved in experiments in the gas chambers. Bayer didn't want to admit that a Jewish guy created the one product that keeps their company in business. So, to this day, Bayer officially gives credit to Felix Hoffman, a nice Aryan man, for inventing aspirin.

Siemens

Thecasesolutions.com

Siemens used slaves from concentration camps to get them to help them make the gas chambers and then would kill them.

Coca-Cola, specifically Fanta

Thecasesolutions.com

Fanta was invented in Germany during WWII and Coca Cola supported the Union but kept making money from the sodas they were making.