

CORPORATE LAW

TheCasesolutions.com

CORPORATE LAW

TheCasesolutions.com

What is a Corporate Lawyer

Corporate lawyers are experts in business law and all related concepts. They defend clients and provide legal advisement, assistance and advocacy to corporations or government agencies in financial, securities or real estate law and other similar areas. They are subject to numerous educational and license requirements before becoming licensed corporate attorneys.

Main Functions

Corporate lawyers are responsible for understanding, defending and upholding any and all legal matters related to business and corporate affairs.

Corporate lawyers may advise or defend individual clients or corporations in issues related to taxation, patents, mergers and acquisitions, global economics, securities, accounting, business contracts and more.

Duties

They are well-versed in all of the above areas, as well as being knowledgeable about business and finance law, corporate disputes and resolutions, and white-collar crimes, criminals and penalties. Their job duties may include meeting with clients and other attorneys, preparing legal briefs, opening and closing courtroom arguments, conducting research and compiling evidence.

Corporate lawyers generally work in private legal offices; however, some are employed by large law firms and others have their own private practice.

Main Functions

Corporate lawyers are responsible for understanding, defending and upholding any and all legal matters related to business and corporate affairs.

Corporate lawyers may advise or defend individual clients or corporations in issues related to taxation, patents, mergers and acquisitions, global economics, securities, accounting, business contracts and more.