

Democratic Visions Harvard Case Solution & Analysis

Democratic Visions Harvard Case Solution & Analysis

How can students take actions that reflect a vision of social justice?

Based on the ideas of Westheimer and Kahne

Personally Responsible Citizen

Occurs when one person sees a problem and decides on his or her own to do something about it:

Motivations

- I want to set an example for others
- I want to be a good person
- I believe it is important to have honesty, integrity, self-discipline and hard work.
- I value compassion and empathy.

RumbleRum.com

Motivations

- I want to set an example for others
- I want to be a good person
- I believe it is important to have honesty, integrity, self-discipline and hard work.
- I value compassion and empathy.

RumbleRum.com

Participatory Citizen

Occurs when a person or group sees an injustice and the group decides to take action.

Motivations

- I want to work actively with others to achieve a more just world
- I want to help my family, community and others
- I like to plan and organize events with others to address problems.

Motivations

- I want to work actively with others to achieve a more just world
- I want to help my family, community and others
- I like to plan and organize events with others to address problems.

Justice-Oriented Citizen

Students consider collective strategies for change that challenge injustice and, when possible, address root causes of problems.

Motivations

- I want to know why things happen
- I see connections among all aspects of life
- I want to learn about others' projects and ideas
- I want to work with others to make better for everyone
- I want to share ideas and come to consensus before taking action

What dovedoddle.com