Advantages of globalization:

Free Trade

Globalization is solely responsible for the establishment of free trade between nations and it is because of this, countries are now able to produce and import goods more without paying heavy taxes. As a result, countries such as the US are now able to enjoy a wide range of products at a reasonable price. Free trade also helps the US to import goods at a lower cost than producing them domestically.

Culture

Due to globalization, information about different cultures and customs are now being shared across the world. It is known for being a multicultural job where people of all nationalities and ethnicity have found a place to call home. This leads to a cultural blend and it does not only increase people's understanding of different cultures but also combats racism, as well as increases tolerance among people with different backgrounds.

Employment

An increase in employment in the US is also the result of globalization. As the US focuses its resources in producing goods which are more profitable to the economy, it simultaneously increases employment and more job opportunities become available.

Politics

Over time, the birth of globalization, politics are now being addressed on a global platform. Every nation is closely related; it leads to what countries such as the US has to handle. Even issues such as global warming, depletion of natural resources, increasing oil prices, etc. must be addressed on a political level and it concerns the whole world. In addition to this, political issues now have changed from countries, which other countries are forced to do their political matters to countries being and supporting to resolve these issues.
