Where does our chocolate come from?

We all love chocolate, but do we ever think about where our chocolate comes from? It actually all starts in the forest, on the pod of a cacao tree. Inside each pod on the cacao tree are singulars from 30-50 bitter seeds, which wouldn't taste very good if you ate them! To turn them into something better, the seeds are roasted naturally, dried (usually in the sun), and then sent to a factory for cleaning, roasting, cracking, and crushing!
This process eventually leaves behind a paste known as chocolate liquor, which can then be turned into chocolate bars by adding it with ingredients such as sugar, vanilla, and milk - YUM!
